PART 1 – PROMPT COMPARISON ANALYSIS (Marketing Domain)

Domain: Marketing

Task: Our main goal is to create clear and engaging Instagram post ideas for our handmade jewellery brand to increase visibility, attract customers. Our prompts aim is creative ideas that can be used for 1 month social media calendar.

Vague Prompt:

“Give me some social media ideas for my jewelry business.”

Give me some social media ideas for my jewelry business

Alright Yaşar, let's level up your jewelry business' social media game with ideas that actually build trust, show craftsmanship, and convert followers into customers. Think of these as content pillars you can rotate through so your page never feels repetitive.

12 Social Media Content Ideas for Your Jewelry Business

1. "From Raw to Royalty" Before/After Series
Show the raw materials → then the finished piece.
People love transformation content, especially in jewelry.

Examples:

- Raw stone → polished bead → finished tasbih
- Silver bar → shaped ring → engraved details

2. Craftsmanship Close-Ups
Record macro shots of carving, sanding, soldering, stone setting, knotting—anything handmade.
This builds premium brand perception instantly.

3. "How It's Made" Mini Tutorials
Not full tutorials, just 10–20 second glimpses:

- Cutting and shaping
- Polishing
- Engraving
- Resin mixing
- Lace motif carving (this fits your tasbih brand perfectly)

People appreciate the skill → more willingness to pay higher prices.

4. Story Behind the Design
Once a week, tell the emotional or cultural meaning behind a piece.

Example:
"This motif was inspired by Ottoman lace patterns representing protection and continuity."

These posts create connection and shareability.

5. Customer Reactions / "Unboxing the Experience"
Ask customers to send:

- Photos
- Videos
- Unboxing clips
- Hand close-ups

You can repost these as social proof.

6. "Jewelry Care Tips"
Teach your audience:

- How to clean silver
- How to protect resin
- How to store tasbihs
- How to prevent tarnishing

These position you as a trusted expert, not just a seller.

7. Limited Edition Drops (Show Teasers)
Build hype:

- Post a blurred sneak peek
- Close-up of carved patterns
- "Only 10 pieces will be released"
- Countdown timer

Drops create urgency → more sales.

8. "Satisfying" Polishing Videos
Polishing is viral content.
If you show a dirty/dull piece becoming shiny → people watch and rewatch.

9. "Day in My Workshop" Behind-the-Scenes
Just film your table, tools, resin molds, carving tools, even your mistakes.
Authenticity sells.

10. Style/Outfit Ideas
Show how your jewelry looks in real life:

- Minimalist male wrist stack
- Elegant women's ring combo
- Tasbih + watch combos

This helps customers visualize themselves wearing it.

11. Price Justification Posts
Softly educate your audience:

- Why hand-carved costs more
- Time-lapse of the 3–4 hour carving
- High-quality materials explanation
- Close-ups showing details vs cheap mass-produced items

This eliminates price objections.

12. "Who Is This For?" Personality-Based Posts
Create posts that speak directly to customer types:

- "For the man who likes classic elegance..."
- "For the woman who loves bold jewelry..."
- "For the collector who values craftsmanship..."

People buy when they feel seen.

If you want, I can create for you:

- A full 30-day content calendar
- Post-by-post captions
- Reels/TikTok scripts
- Hashtags specific to your niche
- Branding ideas for your tasbih line

Just tell me: Instagram, TikTok, or both? And what jewelry exactly do you want to focus on first?

Comparison Analysis

The vague prompt gave us a general answer that lacked structure and no strategic value. Because our instruction was unclear. ChatGPT gave us an answer that can be applied to any business. It was not specific. It did not provide captions or explain why specific post would be effective.

In the other and our improved version use of role prompting leaded the AI as a professional strategist, resulting in expert level suggestions. Adding context and audience details helped the AI tailor the ideas to aesthetic-focused young women interested in handmade jewelry. The requirement for a structured table improved clarity and made the output ready for our use. Additionally, including constraints like 10 ideas and specific product details consistent responses. Version B's ideas were trend-oriented, visually descriptive, and aligned with brand identity.

Overall, Version B worked better because it applied core prompt engineering principles: clarity, constraints, role assignment, and structured formatting.

PART 2 – PRACTICAL PROMPT DESIGN (CO-STAR Framework)

Framework Selection & Justification

The CO-STAR Framework offers a comprehensive framework for creating strategic content, which is why I chose it. It takes focus, knowledge of the target market, and a clear goal to create a one-month social media content calendar for a handmade jewelry company. Important elements that CO-STAR facilitates the organization of include the audience profile, the tone and style of the posts, the goal of increasing engagement, the business context, and the format for expected responses. It is therefore perfect for jobs requiring creativity and consistent messaging. For marketing content, CO-STAR provides the best balance between structure and flexibility when compared to other frameworks.

Refinement & Iteration

After reviewing the original output, I discovered two significant errors. First of all, some of the caption concepts were too short and lacked emotional resonance. Handmade jewelry captions should be more personal and in-depth because audiences often respond better to stories. Second, the post types were not very varied; on some days, the same format was used repeatedly. A more successful strategy requires a more diverse mix of user-generated content, lifestyle posts, tutorials, and reels.

Better Follow-Up Inquiry:

Improve the previous calendar by adding more brand personality, emotional appeal, and narrative to the caption ideas. Add unboxing reels, lifestyle-oriented images, client endorsements, and tutorials to expand the range of post formats. Keep the table the same.

Refined Follow-Up Prompt:

“Improve the previous calendar by rewriting the caption concepts with more storytelling, emotional appeal, and brand personality. Add more variety to the post types, including tutorials, customer testimonials, unboxing reels, and lifestyle aesthetic shots. Keep the same table structure.”

Explanation of Improvements:

The finished product included richer, more emotionally engaging captions and unique post formats like testimonials and tutorials. Consequently, the calendar improved in terms of audience engagement, brand consistency, and audience connection. The refinement process demonstrated that iteration yields more sophisticated AI outcomes.

Framework Effectiveness Reflection

The CO-STAR framework was very effective for this task because it helped me to clearly identify the key components of a social media content calendar. By specifying context, audience, and tone, the AI produced posts that felt more consistent with the brand identity than generic. The response section was especially useful because it ensured that the AI generated the output in a structured, implementation-ready format. Compared to other frameworks, CO-STAR offers a good balance between creativity and detail, which makes it ideal for marketing tasks requiring consistent branding. I would still use CO-STAR for content planning even though RACI might be better suited for more analytical tasks like competitive research. Ultimately, CO-STAR streamlined the process and ensured the AI understood expectations.

PART 3 – CRITICAL REFLECTIONSkill Progression

Throughout the first half of this course, I have moved from a general understanding of prompt engineering to its purposeful and organized application. One of my major "aha" moments was realizing how much a response improves when the prompt includes explicit context, constraints, and role definition. I often wrote simple prompts and accepted any answer I received. I now understand how to affect the AI's reasoning and output quality using frameworks and advanced techniques. The hardest thing for me to understand was how to consistently use structured prompting. Even though there were moments when I believed the AI already "understood" my expectations, I found that explicit instruction always yields better results. Through experimentation, I became more adept at controlling tone and level of detail.

Practical Application

Prompt engineering is useful in many aspects of my actual work as a product designer and entrepreneur, particularly in marketing, technical documentation, and customer service. For instance, I could create product descriptions, launch strategies, and social media content using structured prompting when introducing a new line of handmade goods. To guarantee clarity, consistency, and quantifiable outcomes, frameworks such as CO-STAR or SMART would be helpful. I foresee difficulties like ensuring that AI content adheres to brand identity and steering clear of repetitive outputs. I would use iterative prompting and offer comprehensive brand guidelines, sample outputs, and constraints in order to address this. I can increase content production, preserve creativity, and save time while maintaining quality control thanks to prompt engineering.

Limitations & Ethics

AI tools have disadvantages despite their advantages. First, user verification is necessary because LLMs may generate false or misleading information. Second, AI results can occasionally be biased or generic if the prompt is unclear. Ethical considerations must be taken into account, especially when producing marketing content. For example, I have to avoid using misleading messaging that misrepresents the caliber of my products or AI-generated content. To ensure responsible use, I would continuously review, edit, and validate AI outputs before publishing. I would also follow transparency guidelines to ensure that the content accurately reflects the brand's values.

Goals for the Second Half

I hope to improve my ability to use multi-step reasoning prompts and try out additional frameworks during the remainder of the course. I also want to get better at effectively refining outputs. My primary objective is to become proficient in iterative prompting for technical and professional marketing tasks.
